The International Journal of Environmental, Cultural, Economic and Social Sustainability: Volume 6, Number 3

The International Journal of Environmental, Cultural, Economic and Social Sustainability creates a place for the publication of papers presenting innovative theories and practices of sustainability. The journal is cross-disciplinary in its scope, a meeting point for natural and social scientists, researchers and practitioners, professionals and community representatives. The perspectives presented in the journal range from big picture analyses which address global and universal concerns, to detailed case studies which speak of localised applications of the principles and practices of sustainability. The papers traverse a broad terrain, sometimes technically and other times socially oriented, sometimes theoretical and other times practical in their perspective, and sometimes reflecting dispassionate analysis whilst at other times suggesting interested strategies for action. The journal is relevant for academics in the social sciences, applied sciences, the humanities, the professions and education, research students, public administrators in local, provincial and state government, representatives of the private sector and trainers and industry consultants. The International Journal of Environmental, Cultural, Economic and Social Sustainability is peer-reviewed, supported by rigorous, criterion-referenced article ranking and qualitative commentary processes, ensuring that only intellectual work of significance is published.
