Cinco autores de Angola, quatro de Guiné-Bissau e sete escritores do Brasil, entre eles dois de nossos maiores, Machado de Assis e Lima Barreto, estão reunidos na coletânea Contos do mar sem fim, que chega agora às prateleiras. O título remete aos célebres versos de Fernando Pessoa: "O mar sem fim é português". Nas entrelinhas, o convite para deixar a mente percorrer as imagens que fazem parte do cotidiano dos três povos... E, de fato, os 16 contos selecionados têm em comum o idioma e suas particularidades em cada nação no qual é falado. "A rota de navegação escolhida para atravessarmos esse mar imaginário é instigante em todos os sentidos", explica, na orelha, a professora Laura Cavalcanti Padilha.

"Não nos podemos esquecer — e os textos, eles próprios, nos impedem — que a África é um múltiplo e só assim pode ser pensada", avança Padilha na apresentação. Dessa concepção fazem parte os modos dos angolanos e guineenses de viver e se organizar social e simbolicamente. Tudo isso sem falar no intercâmbio de experiências entre os países, seja na dor provocada pela guerra, seja na mancha de sangue dos escravos, que tingiu os oceanos no tempo da escravidão e continua a permear as lembranças dos seus descendentes em Angola, Guiné-Bissau ou no Brasil.
