Preparing for Arbitration: What You Need to Know (Quick Prep) Charles F. Corcoran III

Preparing for Arbitration is a user-friendly and practical guide to the arbitration process. Written by a distinguished attorney with more than 400 days of arbitration experience, both as counsel and as arbitrator, this unique reference speaks to you directly about all aspects of arbitration. This accessible guidebook answers hundreds of questions, some of which you may never have thought to ask: What can you expect to happen in your first arbitration hearing? How should you conduct yourself? How does arbitration differ from litigation? Should you arbitrate or should you litigate in the courts? Should you negotiate or mediate? Should your company include an arbitration clause in future contracts? If so, how should that clause be written? The product of extensive arbitration practice and experience, Preparing for Arbitration can help you answer these questions, as well as assist you in gathering and organizing documents, developing your arbitration plan, and preparing for the arbitration process itself. You'll be informed and educated after reading this guide, and prepared to approach your upcoming arbitration proceedings with confidence.

About the Author Charles F. Corcoran III has more than 400 days of experience as arbitrator and mediator in commercial, construction, and employment disputes. Mr. Corcoran graduated magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa from Yale College, studied history at Gonville & Caius College, University of Cambridge, England, and graduated from the Yale Law School. For several years he taught trial methods at Western New England Law School.
